My dearest Lootsie:-

Just received your darling big fat letter, and Lovie, would just love to answer it as I want to, but I just simply can't as since the last 3 or 4 days, I've been terribly rushed, and as you know, I want to work up a nice practice so that I'll be sure, God willing, that you will be here on May 3rd, 1919, so I'll just write a few words to-day, and leave everything for the big letter, and in it I have some good news.

Darling mine, even in this short letter, I must express my lonesomeness for you. I just yearn for you, darling, and as matter of fact, I often believe I'm unwell, feeling as if my heart is constantly heavy, and my thoughts always with you.

Love, a woman whom I expected and about whom I'll write to-morrow, has just come in, so please darling, forgive this short letter. You will be happy after I tell you in to-morrow's letter of what I have accomplished in 6 days.

Shall close, love, with all my love to you, my own darling wife, nearest & dearest in all the world,

Every lovingly
Joe
